

What if your women's ministry could impact teen girls and also inspire their mothers?

Women's ministry is designed to grow and challenge women in the Word through opportunities to study Scripture, develop relationships, and reach out beyond the church walls. Wouldn't it be wonderful, however, to put into place a program that did all this, plus reach into the next generation of young women?

The ministry of More to Be is excited to present a format that enables women's ministry teams the ability to offer a unique mentoring program to teen girls while also inspiring their mothers through intimate fellowship gatherings. While ETC. directly impacts the lives of teens girls through providing opportunities for women to mentor intentionally, using resources found at www.moretobe.com, Grace Chats has the potential to reach their mothers with Godly wisdom through the input of others who have gone down the road once before. Through combining ETC. and Grace Chats together, we believe women ministries can step out of the traditional structure of women only events, thereby embracing the principles found in Titus 2. This concept will only enhance the mission of a womens ministry team, drawing together the generations within a church and equipping them to be the light of Christ as they go into the world!

etc.

ETC. stands for Evening Tea & Chat, which offers a unique opportunity for women to step into significant mentoring roles with the next generation through a bi-monthly or monthly gathering designed to reach teen girls where they are at -- questioning everything from God to truth to boys to the culture. ETC. is a tried and true format for inviting teen girls to open up and receive answers to their real questions. Through providing a warm setting, lots of hot tea, a stack of index cards for asking questions, and a guided topical lesson, teen girls are drawn into all that you can offer through using ETC. You can learn more about ETC. at <http://www.moretobe.com/etc/>.

Grace CHATS

It is not only teens that need their questions answered. Moms are also looking for encouragement and wisdom! Held simultaneously as ETC., Grace Chats provides a place for moms to interact with others in a similar season in life while enjoying a warm cup of tea and also gleaning a good dose of wisdom from a few older women willing to lead a topical discussion steeped in Biblical truth. Using the Truth & Topic resources available at More to Be, a Grace Chats discussion time will equip and inspire moms to intentionally parent their children with Biblical values and wisdom.

Would you like to take the next step?

Contact Lisa Pulliam, Founder of More to Be, today!